,Dear Nili

Tuesday night was an amazing evening and the film was full of tension, humour and personal drama. My daughter was here visiting so she came with me and we did a lot ...of crying together. Difficult to hear my father's voice

There was a lot of poetic license in the film and I want to put one fact straight. My sister NEVER wrote a letter to my parents. My father never let the fact that my mother was on board be known to the hijackers. The crew were instructed not to let on either. During the whole ordeal, they never exchanged a word or looks although my father had free access to the passenger cabin. Whilst at the air terminal where he met with Dayan and Dado and it was time for him to return to the plane, my father said to Dayan: I have 4 children, 3 of whom are young adults and can take care of themselves. My 15 year old daughter needs to complete her education and be taken care of. Dayan called Golda who told him that the State of Israel would take care of her education. On a scrap of paper my father wrote "Feeka's education taken care of should anything happen. I love you always. Reg". He returned to the plane alone, entered from the rear and on his way to the cockpit dropped the note in my mother's lap without exchanging words or a look. My sister has the note. It is the only note. He said it was hard not to share the information of what was about to happen with anyone, even with the crew, in case someone inadvertently gave the game away by body language.

I just want to set the record straight.

Also, my mother was never a vegetarian - she cooked the greatest steaks.... Don't know where they got that from. She also didn't speak French... Oh well.

I got to meet other members of the Sayeret Matkal team and thank them personally for giving my family a further 38 years of being together and saving my parents , by risking their own young lives, from dying at age 50.

Linda

Mazal Tov to you. 70 is not the end of the world, believe me, I have already went through the “crisis” :). It is a rewarding age (if one is healthy) because as you said, you .are surrounded by a growing family
,all the best

,Dear Nili

I want to thank you so much for helping my daughter in law Tali in having Ehud dedicate birthday wishes to me. It was such a surprise - my children never fail to amaze me. Ehud's greetings were so meaningful and heartfelt. Please thank him for me.

Tali told me you were ever so helpful and gracious in making this happen.

Thank you both so much.
Linda

,Dear Linda
Sure we have got it. Didn’t I thank you? Didn't I acknowledge receipt? Shame on me. It is not like me. Maybe too many travels (and age…) make .me forgetful
.Ehud was very moved to read the dedication
,thanks again and sorry
